While the idea of the Boulder meet was probably taken from the Utah plan, one cannot help but admire the spirit of that school in doing something, Boulder with a population of a couple of thousand is undertaking the biggest meet ever pulled off in the west. The fact that the University of Colorado is situated in a country village lioes not seem to dampen the spirit of letting the world know there is such a school as the world know there is such a school as the U. of C. It is just this kind of a spirit that prevails throughout the entire state that makes Colorado what it is today.
